The Legacy of trading culture!

The term Chandni Chowk originally referred only to the square that had a reflecting pool. Now the entire straight road which runs through the middle of the walled city, from Lahori Gate of the Red Fort to Fatehpuri Masjid is called Chandni Chowk.

What started as the finest market for the royalty in gold jewellery, silver, and rare metals, Dariba remains Chandni Chowk's speciality. Even today, this market boasts of variety and authenticity in food, delicacies and sweets of more than 1,000 kinds, Saris with Chikan and Zari, narrow lanes selling books, clothing, electronic, consumer goods, shoes and leather goods. Chandni Chowk is also the location of the original Haldiram's and brands such as Gianis. Nai Sarak is the wholesale market of stationery, books, paper and decorative materials. Lal Kuan is a wholesale market for hardware and hotel kitchen equipment. It is adjacent to Tilak Market which is a wholesale market for industrial chemicals. Located at the western end of Chandni Chowk, Khari Baoli is a street entirely dedicated to all kinds of spices, dried fruits, nuts, and herbs. This market also offers trophies, shields, mementos and related items.
